

U.S. Government
Socratic Seminar: Recreational Marijuana

The ability for citizens to propose and pass state statutes and amendments through the initiative process has led to a number of states legalizing the use of recreational marijuana for people older than 21. The federal government laws against marijuana possession are still in place and Federal law enforcement can still arrest anyone for possession. Policies on enforcing the federal law have changed since the Obama administration left office and the Trump administration entered office. Your question for seminar this week is:

Which level of government should be able to make and enforce laws governing marijuana possession, the Federal Government or the states? (NOTE: the question is NOT whether or not marijuana should be legal)

U.S. Government
Socratic Seminar: Recreational Marijuana

The ability for citizens to propose and pass state statutes and amendments through the initiative process has led to a number of states legalizing the use of recreational marijuana for people older than 21. The federal government laws against marijuana possession are still in place and Federal law enforcement can still arrest anyone for possession. Policies on enforcing the federal law have changed since the Obama administration left office and the Trump administration entered office. Your question for seminar this week is:

Which level of government should be able to make and enforce laws governing marijuana possession, the Federal Government or the states? (NOTE: the question is NOT whether or not marijuana should be legal)